ganized for the Campaign.

Republicans of Bangor opened the campaign last evening in the most successful manner. After the enthusiastic Blaine meeting had been adjourned and enthusiastically cheered as adjournment was made to City Hall where Mr. Blaine and Logan were organized in the most successful manner. The remarks of everybody exceeded the right ring, to the and were received with round after round of applause by the large gathering therein. The speech on the Stand by Hon. of the Blaine and Logan Club appeared very constructive, and the policy of Republicans in the most works will be followed upon for years to come in the campaign. Many have an opportunity to participate in the pending contest of the old Fourth District will contribute to full share to the general fund in support of Blaine to be raised shortly.

mocratic State Convention

Democratic State convention will be held in this city next week. warm session and it would be a Democratic convention if we have something of a row. The principal fight will be over the election of delegates at large to the Democratic convention, judging from the talk of the divine guard there will be considerable time among the friends of Hon. Eugene Hale. Republicans are watching this contest. The nomination of Mr. Blaine has struck Democrats upon the hopes of the Democratic ranks and the general feeling against the ticket is that almost everybody will have the nomination.

Mr Blaine's Strength

We publish the strong extracts from Washington letter to the Boston Advertiser which shows Mr. Blaine's great strength among the representatives of the party in Republican National Convention. It shows that the leaders of the opposing forces were trying to form any combination that would be likely to weaken Blaine in the convention, but all efforts failed. Rumors were spread that Edmunds would be nominated, but the opposition was absolutely powerless to take the overwhelming sentiment in favor of Mr. Blaine was so decided that the friends of Edmunds thought it best not to make the effort.

Vermont has been one of the most bitter and bitterly prejudiced opponents of Mr. Blaine, having again and again deserted to falsehood and intrigues to the overthrow of his hopes as a public man, and this confession of his strength may well give pause to those who have been misled by facts too glaring not to prevent showing how much reliance is to be placed in the statements that Mr. Blaine is weak and that Vermont would not be prevented from voting for him if he should be nominated. Vermont is one of the States which will not be deserted because he is said by free-trade advocates and free-trade papers to be opposed to the tariff. Vermont is one of the States which will not be deserted because they were unable to call Blaine the friend of the people.

The letter was follows:

Efforts to defeat the nomination of Mr. Blaine were many. There were conferences held in Burlington, New York and Washington. Burlington of New York, Chester A. Arthur, Senator Platt, Senator Edmunds, Senator Frelinghuysen and others were present. The night before the convention they were at work until early morning. They were on a golf course but on nothing else. Platt said that he could have Ohio from going to Blaine only if the others would go to John Sherman. Lodge asked him if he had any hope of other accessions. Platt said No. He said Arthur men were asked what they would do. Burlington stated a while, and all he could promise was the outside was 120 Arthur votes for Sherman. Some of Logan's friends would go to Blaine while the Westerners, who had voted for Edmunds, gave notice that their vote for Blaine. General Sherman was then discussed. Nothing but stability could be urged in his favor. Judge Platt said he could not receive precedence of Blaine. Platt said he could not receive precedence of Blaine. Platt said he could not receive precedence of Blaine.

Organized for the Campaign

The Republicans of Bangor opened the campaign last evening in a most successful manner. After the meeting adjourned had organized and in the city there had been an adjournment was held in City Hall when a Blaine and Logan club was organized in the most enthusiastic manner. The speeches of the evening were all in the right vein for Republicans to work upon for the campaign. Mr. Blaine's letter was received with great applause. The following officers were elected: President, Hon. Charles A. Boutelle; Vice-Presidents, Hon. Eugene Hale, Hon. Seth L. Milliken, Hon. Nathan Cutler, Hon. Charles Hamlin, Hon. Lucilius Emery, Hon. Joseph Ware, Hon. Edward Kent, Hon. Joseph Titcomb, Hon. Lorenzo Sabine, Hon. Ira Berry, Hon. Nathaniel Wheeler, Hon. Ezra Carter, Hon. Ezra Parker, Hon. Ezra Drew, Hon. Ezra Stetson, Hon. Ezra Moore, Hon. Ezra Nichols, Hon. Ezra Osgood, Hon. Ezra Pease, Hon. Ezra Quimby, Hon. Ezra Rand, Hon. Ezra Smith, Hon. Ezra Thayer, Hon. Ezra Wade, Hon. Ezra Young. Secretary, Hon. Ezra Cushing; Assistant Secretary, Hon. Ezra Dodge; Treasurer, Hon. Ezra Fogg; Executive Committee, Hon. Ezra Gould, Hon. Ezra Hall, Hon. Ezra Jones, Hon. Ezra Kimball, Hon. Ezra Lane, Hon. Ezra Moore, Hon. Ezra Nichols, Hon. Ezra Osgood, Hon. Ezra Pease, Hon. Ezra Quimby, Hon. Ezra Rand, Hon. Ezra Smith, Hon. Ezra Thayer, Hon. Ezra Wade, Hon. Ezra Young.

More Inconsistency.

During the recent Republican National Convention Mr. George William Curtis was repeatedly criticised for his inconsistency as a civil service reformer, as all through the session he freely co-operated with the machine politicians to further his policy. It was said that he let Blaine, even going so far as to warmly urge, a federal officeholder, a temporary chairman, a great breach of the civil service laws. On his return from the convention he came out with an editorial in Harper's Weekly in opposition to the nominees and now some of the papers have produced back numbers of Harper's in which he warmly commends Mr. Blaine as a civil service reformer and writes words of praise for his foreign policy. It will take Mr. Curtis some time to explain these inconsistencies to the satisfaction of the public. The extracts in Harper's referred to are as follows:

Harper's Weekly, September 13, 1884.

The speeches of Mr. Blaine in Maine, and of Senator Harrison in Indiana, with the brief and unmistakable order of Senator Lowell in Boston, following every display of all sorts of the loyal Hubbell and the significant withdrawal of more than a thousand honest citizens of Massachusetts of all parties, show that they will vote for no representative in Congress whose character and record do not promise an earnest and aggressive action for reform, and an unmistakable expression of public conviction and purpose which will certainly have their way. . . . Mr. Blaine pronounced plainly for some kind of a form, and Mr. Blaine said in detail that he should be glad to see every Federal officer, however honorable his position, appointed for a specific term, during which he should not be removed except for causes to be specified, proved and recorded, and for subordinate officers he thought the term of six years would be a proper term of office.

(Harper's Weekly, March 22, 1884.)

The speech of Mr. Blaine for the State Department shows that the President means to have a party behind him. Mr. Blaine is upright, brilliant, a sensible public man, with a larger grasp of statesmanship than is shown by any other public leader, although upon questions of certain events in his career have alienated the sympathy of many Republicans whose approval is worth any man's winning. As Secretary of State his course will be regarded not only without prejudice, but with the most friendly anticipation. . . . The administration begins the reform in an admirable manner, with a nomination to which no part of the party opposes objection.

(Harper's Weekly, November 15, 1881.)

The letter of Secretary Blaine upon the Panama canal was written on the 30th of June last, and is now transmitted to the Senate under the resolution lately adopted. The letter agrees with admirable frankness and firmness the traditional and reasonable position of American policy, and it will be universally applauded. By the situation of interest in the interway across the Isthmus is paramount, we have solemnly guaranteed the neutrality to the world, of Colombia, and the guarantee needs no assent from any other power. As Mr. Blaine fairly says, in the time of war we could not more permit the passage of armed hostile expeditions through a Panama canal than over the railways that connect the Atlantic and Pacific shores of this country, and we should take all necessary precautions to prevent the establishment of such a canal as put our interests and our peace at the mercy of any other power. . . . The Secretary quotes with the United States the general Europe guarantees of neutrality respecting Turkish waters, and gives the suggested guarantee a very popular sound of community in the Turkish waters, which, in the hands of the United States, would be a fault. They would be the strongest and the most characteristic of their armament, and they would claim no more than that which is great. The letter is a proper and timely exercise of the statesmanship which Mr. Blaine's position and antecedents entitle us to expect from him. It is optimally adapted to meet any such proposition as a joint European guarantee for the Isthmus has been advanced. But whether the project was only a tentative rumor or not, it is plainly established that the letter is sufficiently free from all the objections of the shallow thinking with which Mr. Blaine's views are charged by the opponents of his foreign policy. He was right in believing in instant disavowal of any intrigue against Secretary Frelinghuysen, and he has established his official expression by his prompt, vigorous, direct and good sense.

Again in an article on the Administration, June 7, 1881, Harper's Weekly said that Mr. Curtis is the editorial writer.

Secretary Blaine's prompt and emphatic action of defence of naturalized citizens and of other stern and hostile correspondence policy in Europe toward certain American exports showed character in repose.

Free Trade Loose Talk

(Providence Press.)

To better illustration of the value of talk of the loose talk which is indulged in by the class of theorists I point all reformers of which it is said "they talk all the time." Good men of this purpose talk of wharves and talk them through the journals. It has been afforded the public of late than that cited by the Hon. William D. Eaton, in his speech in the National House of Representatives on the Morrison tariff bill. It appears from the speech of Mr. Eaton that a learned professor talked to a large manufacturing village in his county in which he lives in a speech upon the tariff question. Perhaps he might be expected, in favor of free trade, in the course of his remarks to say to a farmer standing by a post-room whom he thought he might safely subject to operate upon, and whose character of his thoughts, he happened to provoke the following colloquy:

Learned professor—My friend you are a farmer?

Farmer—Yes.

Learned professor—You live here?

Farmer—Yes.

Learned professor—Do you know these manufacturers in this village? Are robbing you?

Farmer—Why, no, I do not know it. How can they rob me? I came here ten years ago with $500, I bought a farm, running in debt $2,500 for my farm and stock. I went to work raising truck for this village. I paid my debt and have got money in the savings bank and do not owe any man a dollar. How have they robbed me?

Learned professor—Well, it appears you have been a hard working man and have lived hard enough. But you pay sixty cents a yard duty for the very cloth your shirt is made of.

Farmer—Well, professor, you may think so, but you cannot prove it by your nigger or your logarithms. You cannot prove it unless by Æsop's fables, for I did not give but forty cents a yard for the cloth.

The statement of the learned professor that there was a duty of six cents per yard levied on cotton cloth which costs in the market but five cents per yard, and that of the astute Ohio Democratic statesman [Frank Hurd] that the manufacturers of this country are losing, by reason of the tariff, some 2,000,000,000 of purchasers of their manufactured products, when there are not more than 1,300,000,000 people in the world, are on a par, and are deserving of about the same amount of respect, as the groundwork of most free trade arguments.

Judge Forker said at a ratification meeting in Cincinnati that "you might just as well have tried to drain up the waters of the Mississippi river as to have prevented the nomination of James G. Blaine."

Independent Inconsistency.

THE REV. DR. ARMITAGE SAYS THE INDEPENDENTS ARE IN HONOR BOUND TO SUPPORT THE TICKET.

The Rev. Dr. Thomas Armitage, pastor of the Fifth Avenue Baptist church, New York, expressed himself strongly in favor of the Republican Presidential ticket.

"I do not understand," said he, "how those Independents who were delegated to the convention can withhold their support of the ticket. Had they announced in the convention that they were dissatisfied with the nomination, and withdrawn, had they announced their purpose then to nominate an opposition ticket, their action would be consistent. But the nomination of Mr. Blaine was made unanimous. The platform of the convention was assented to. No opposition was made to the nomination of General Logan, and his nomination was made unanimous. Now, I regard these gentlemen who are objecting as honorable men. They were elected by the people of their respective districts to represent them at the convention. They gave no dissenting voice in the unanimous vote. They did not ask to have placed on record their objections to the ticket. It seems to me they are bound as honorable men to support that ticket. I do not see how they can do anything else.

"Mr. Blaine's nomination was such a development of the real wish of the people of the Republican party, as, it seems to me, seldom taken place in the convention of any party. When Mr. Beecher, who is a good and earnest Republican, says he intends to stand by the Republican ticket, not by Mr. Blaine, I say I don't understand how he can do it. I wish he would tell me—not that I want to vote against Mr. Blaine, however.

"I am a pretty good Republican. I have voted the ticket but once, and then I voted for Greeley. I was in Edmunds' room. I think I would rather have voted for him, but I am very well pleased with the ticket as it is, and I am quite satisfied that it will be elected. I don't like to see so many good Republicans as these seem to be hesitating as if they did not know what course to take. I would like to give them such a pulling, good and kindly talk as Horace Greeley used to. The Tribune has done a great deal to nominate Mr. Blaine, and I think it has been all through the canvass fair and manly. I hope it will not be heavy now. I think Independents should remember that in voting for candidates who are opposed to Mr. Blaine they are putting themselves outside of the party. They ought to remember they are in honor bound to support the ticket.

Reasons for Supporting the Ticket

A DEMOCRATIC VICTORY TO BE AVOIDED—MR. BLAINE'S CAREER.

J. A. Allen of Cambridge, who was invited to the Freethinker and Blaine meeting in Boston, sent a reply which was not read at the meeting. The following is the substance of the letter:

I decided not to attend such a meeting, because I believe it and actually believe the principles of the Republican party are announced in the Chicago platform, and am opposed to the policy of the Democratic party as shown by their action in Congress. It seems clear that one of the other of the two great political parties must rule during the next four years, and I am called upon to decide which I prefer—the principles and traditions of the old Republican party, or the policy and traditions of the old Democratic party. Any movement which tends to defeat the Republican party must place the government in the hands of the Democratic party, believing as I do that this would result in retarding the progress of this country for a lifetime, I feel constrained to do what I can to prevent such a catastrophe.

In regard to the resolutions made at Chicago, I do not forget that President Garfield selected Mr. Blaine to fill the most important place in his cabinet. President Garfield had served nearly twenty years in Congress with Mr. Blaine. This gave him an opportunity enjoyed by but few others, then in this country to judge of Mr. Blaine's fitness to hold a position of high trust and responsibility. I have no confidence in President Garfield's judgment than in newspaper reports, which I hope to be colored by prejudice, have found no unfavorable criticism upon Mr. Blaine since the death of President Garfield up to the present day. On the contrary, I have understood his course to have been highly commended by everybody. If he was a suitable man to hold a high office during the life of our late President, I fail to see why he is not qualified at this time. Upon the above grounds, and with my strong belief in the principles of the Republican party, I am willing to accept the choice of the great majority of that party in the selection of a candidate for the Presidency.

From the West

The following letter was received a few days since and was accidentally misplaced. Editor of the Whig & Courier

To our friends and fellow-citizens of Maine:

The sons of the Pine Tree State in the Peninsula of Michigan send greetings. We are many miles from the State in which you do so honor by claiming our birth, we have never forgotten our native land. We love our old home, nor to take the liveliest interest in that that touches her welfare and honor. And on this occasion of rejoicing all over the country at the elevation of her favorite son, we wish to send our congratulations to her people, and to extend a brotherly hand to all our friends in the grand old State of our nativity under whose spreading pine we first learned to love and respect the name of Blaine. Therefore be it resolved that in the nomination of James G. Blaine for the Presidency, the Republican party not only does honor to itself and Mr. Blaine but also to her sons wherever they may be scattered.

Also be it resolved that the society send most hearty congratulations to Mr. Blaine and to all people of the State. Also be it resolved that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the leading papers throughout the State.

FORTY-EIGHTH CONGRESS—First Session.

Senate

WASHINGTON, June 16. The chair laid before the Senate the House concurrent resolution giving permission for the exhibition in the capital of the model of the Bartholdi statue of liberty The President of the Senate remarked that he had the impression that there was a statute prohibiting that which the concurrent resolution would permit and the resolution was therefore referred to the Committee on Rules

Mr George, of Mississippi presented a memorial of the Legislature of Mississippi, urging Congress to aid to the Gulf and Ship Island Railroad

Mr. Garland, from the Committee on Judiciary, reported favorably bills removing the political disabilities of Alfred Iverson, of Florida, and E P Alexander, of Georgia These bills were read three times and then passed.

The following resolution was offered by Mr Van Wyck and lies over till to-morrow Resolved, That the Committee on Judiciary be directed to inquire whether the Union or Central Pacific Railroad Companies have been or are responsible for a guaranteed interest on any bonds other than those specifically authorized by Congress, and whether any such stock has been issued by either of the said companies in violation of said act

Mr Ingalls rose to a question of personal privilege He read from the debate of last Friday, on a bill relating to a claim of the State of Georgia for money expended for the common defence in 1777 certain words he said had been inserted in the handwriting of Mr Brown in the official reporter's manuscript of the debate and which Mr Ingalls claimed had not been spoken in the Senate He was not square against the partisan arrows that were flying fast enough to discharge from the gun emplacements of the printing House

Mr Ingalls asked Mr. Brown whether he did not interpolate certain words in the report thereby falsifying the record and committing forgery Mr Brown declined to make an answer to the question The matter finally went over and Mr Plumb called up the report of the Conference Committee on the post office appropriation bill and upon his motion the Senate concurred in the action of the House on the Senate amendment appropriating $150 000 for necessary and special facilities on trunk lines The House increased the amount to $250 000

Mr. Plumb moved the Senate insist on the remaining amendments, which was unanimously agreed to and the Sen to resumed consideration of the Utah bill Mr Brown having the floor

Mr. Brown's amendment permitting divorce only for one cause in places where the United States has exclusive jurisdiction was rejected—yeas four, Messrs Butler, George, Windom and Wright

Mr Vest offered an amendment providing that in no case shall husband and wife be a competent witness in prosecutions for bigamy, except as to the fact of a lawful marriage having been contracted between witness and party defendant With out further action the Senate went into executive session and later adjourned

House.

Under the call of States a number of bills were introduced and referred The only measures of the slightest general interest was one introduced by Mr. Follett, of Ohio, granting 160 acres of the public domain to every honorably discharged Union soldier and sailor of the late war, also by Mr Deuster of Wisconsin, to prevent and punish fraudulent claims against foreign governments, one by Mr Wood, of Indiana, calling for information relative to the funding of public lands, and one by Mr Belford, of Colorado, to provide for the erection of a Union and Confederate Soldiers Home at Denver, Col

Mr Lowry, of Ohio, from the Committee on Elections submitted a report on the contested election case of Campbell vs Morey, declaring the contestant entitled to the seat The report was laid over for future action

Mr Randall, of Pa, moved that the House go into Committee of the Whole on the Deficiency Appropriation bill

Mr Aiken, of South Carolina, hoped that the House would not agree to the motion he thought he was as much in favor of the early adjournment as any one He did not think that the Appropriation Committee should monopolize suspension day

Mr Randall said that the House had fixed June 30th as the date for the adjournment and he understood that the Senate was likely to fix July 1st If either of these dates were determined upon consideration of the appropriation bill must be passed Mr Randall's motion was agreed to and the House went into committee as indicated

A paragraph relating to the compensation of fourth class post masters, confining it to box rents and commission on the sale of waste paper postage stamps etc, not to exceed $1 000 a year was stricken out, 84 to 65 An item of $38 000 was inserted as an allowance in contested election cases, the limitation being $2,000 to each After an unsuccessful attempt by Mr Hatch to have stricken out a section prohibiting the treasury department from considering any claim against the United States unless filed within one year from the passage of the act or within five years after it shall have accrued, the House took a recess until 8 P M

What Ingersoll Says

Col Robert G Ingersoll was asked what he thought of the nomination of Blaine "I think" he answered "he was chosen by the rank and file and not by the politicians He is the choice of, I think, nine-tenths of the Republicans of the western States, and I do not believe there is a Republican district in the United States in which a majority of the Republicans are not and were not for Blaine If any mistake has been made, it has been a mistake of the party The result was not brought about by any trading or trafficking Blaine was nominated because the Republicans are for him The fact is, it was impossible to beat him at Chicago"

"Is there not much opposition to him now?"

"I think there is not as much as there was in the case of Garfield after his nomination"

"How do you comprehim with Garfield in respect to fitness for the office?"

"I think he will make a better President I think he has more executive ability Blaine is regarded as a real American as the representative of the progressive spirit of the country He has a great hold upon the young men"

"Do you consider his record perfect and unassailable?"

"I do not Any man's record can be assailed, no matter how good, but I don't believe that Blaine can be successfully assailed—in other words, nothing can be sustantiated against him Garfield, too, was attacked, and probably there never was a greater storm let loose Nevertheless I doubt very much if Garfield lost a vote There was certainly more said against Garfield than is said against Blaine Besides all this has been discounted long ago"

"Have you any doubts of the success of the Republicans in the coming campaign?"

"Of course nothing is certain, but my judgment is that we will succeed. It will require work and plenty of it I don't think it wise to underrate the strength of the opposition The parties are very evenly divided, and we must remember another thing—that the South is solid or substantially so This gives the Democrats a great advantage. Some enthusiastic Republicans expect to carry West Virginia and others are enthusiastic enough to suppose that we can carry two or three Southern States I make no such calculation I think we can succeed without carrying a Southern State"

"Can Blaine carry New York State?"

"Garfield carried it. No one can tell how it is going to go now There are many new voters, new questions and new influences on both sides I believe Blaine will carry the strength of the party. If he loses some Republicans, he will gain votes that might not have been Republican with any other candidate so that, on the whole, we have very good reason to hope that we will carry New York against anybody the Democrats may nominate."

D., of Boston The Sabbath services drew large congregations which crowded to overflowing the auditorium, of the church. Scores of people attended from a distance, especially from the adjoining town of Patten and Island Falls. After services from Rev. Messrs Haynes and Christie, and the sacrament the closing feature of the services was a gospel temperance meeting, with brief addresses, music etc The hospitality of the citizens to their many guests was profuse and generous, and after an exhilarating and profitable session the conference adjourned, the members doubtless feeling, as one of them said, like St Paul when he came to the three taverns,—he thanked God and took courage.

THE CAMPAIGN OPENED.

OUR FLAG IS THERE.

REPUBLICAN FLAG RAISING.

Formation of a Blaine and Logan Club.

Yesterday the Republicans of this city formally opened the campaign for Blaine and Logan by unfurling a magnificent campaign flag in West Market Square

This was arranged to be done at seven o'clock, but previous to that hour Messrs Fogg & Dole threw out a flag bearing the names of our candidates between their office and mill on Front street, in presence of a large crowd, with music by the Bangor Band and the cheers of the people.

From this place the Band proceeded to West Market Square, where a large assemblage of citizens had already gathered and after playing several selections a splendid new flag was thrown to the breeze on a rope extending from Wheelwright & Clark's block to Smith's block bearing the names on the upper end, of Blaine and Logan, and the American eagle on a shield, and on the lower end the words "For Governor, Frederick Robie For Congress, Charles A Boutelle

The flag was unfurled in handsome style and was received with cheers and more music by the band Ex-Governor Davis then announced that a meeting would immediately be held at City Hall to organize a Blaine and Logan Club The crowd at once proceeded thither headed by the band

After several selections, rendered in their usual fine manner by the band, C L Marston, Chairman of the City Committee called the meeting to order, and called his honor, Mayor Humphrey, to the chair

Mayor Humphrey accepted the chair in a brief speech in which he spoke of the great importance of the coming campaign The great question before the American people, he said is, "Shall the interests of the workingmen of the United States be protected? He spoke of the position of the Republican party on this question and showed what the policy of protection had done for the party during the past twenty five years What platform the Democratic party may adopt we cannot tell but where the Democratic party stands on this question we only know and we know that in case the Democratic party shall succeed, their policy will be to bring about free trade The action of that party during the last six months has been directed to that end

But, he said this was no time for him to make a speech The object of the meeting was for the formation of a Blaine and Logan Club and he was ready to proceed with the business of the meeting

The temporary organization was further perfected by the choice of I Swett Rowe as Secretary

Hon E B Nealley then moved that a committee of three be appointed by the chair to recommend such officers as may be necessary for the Club, and to present a list of names for the various offices

The chair nominated, as that committee E B Nealley, Henry Lord and James M Swett

Hon D E Davis then said that while the committee was out he would like to call upon Hon S H Blake to address the meeting

Mr Blake came forward and addressed the meeting substantially as follows

SPEECH OF HON S H BLAKE

Mr Chairman and Fellow-Citizens You have thrown to the breeze to-night a magnificent flag and it is emblazoned with most noble names It will float in the breezes of heaven from now until November, and will then still float in the breeze as a token of Maine's affection for her beloved citizen

It gives me pleasure to congratulate you on the auspicious opening of this campaign We rejoice that a citizen of Maine is now placed in nomination for the exalted office of President of the United States (Cheers) And we further rejoice that the party that placed him nomination is strong enough to elect him (Renewed Cheering) We have not only a candidate whom we honor and admire but the convention has given us a platform for him to stand upon which all should support During the past twenty five years the policy of this country has been to impose a tariff for the encouragement of domestic industry, and for the promotion of American manufactures The result of this protection is to furnish a market for agricultural products, enhancing the value of these products and increasing the value of the labor which produces these products All over our country in manufacturing villages have sprung up, and in the great West population and wealth have advanced with wonderful strides The other distinctive policy of the platform grows out of the idea of Americanism of our people When the rebellion broke out, threatening to dismember our country, it fired the heart of the North and the people rallied regardless of the cost of life or treasure, fighting for the integrity of the Union In this the Republican party was aided by the Democratic party of the North, with a few unpleasant exceptions This war for the unity of the Nation struck the shackles from five million of slaves, and the platform upon which we stand continues the principle of protection to these emancipated slaves in the rights which we have given them of citizenship and the ballot, and that these rights shall [illegible] them forever

[illegible] principle of the platform is that [illegible] to office in the territories [illegible] not be bestowed as rewards for [illegible] Another principle is that [illegible] labor shall not be imported from [illegible] in competition with American [illegible] Another principle is that [illegible] between Nations shall be settled, as far as it can be, by arbitration and not by war. Still another of the principles enumerated is that a system of wealthy foreign bankers shall no longer be allowed to purchase and control vast territories of our National domain, and look it up to the entrance of free born American citizens.

The platform is a sound one—there is not a rotten plank in it There is not a rotten board in it, but it is built up upon principles dear to the heart of every American citizen, and dear to the life of every Republican. As we are going to maintain the policy that has made our country illustrious that has given it a greater prosperity in the twenty-five years past than any other country under Heaven has attained in one hundred years

After our friends had adopted so noble a platform it was necessary to select candidates to stand upon it It was necessary that some agreement should be reached among the eight hundred making up the convention, and among whom were differences of opinion as to the most desirable candidate The only way to arrive at this was on the doctrine that the majority should control Our distinguished friend and citizen of Maine was made the nominee He was clearly the choice of two-thirds of the convention, and his nomination was finally made unanimous I do not hear of any fault found with the platform So far as I can hear every delegate approves of it The candidate was placed on that platform

But we hear of a movement on the part of certain people who declare that they cannot support Mr Blaine, because Mr Edmunds, or some other man whom they wanted, has more virtue than Mr Blaine Mr Blaine has lived among us many years All have seen him, many of us know him well He is a man of sound and vigorous health, a man in the very prime of life a man who has a larger acquaintance with public men and measures than any other man in public life How better could they have done than to have placed him in nomination?

I was in Washington during four months of last winter and I met all of these candidates, and I heard the comments made upon them in the hotels, the theatres, at parties and in the lobbies of Congress I know that the judgment thus form I is not always reliable, but I believe that in this case it is to be relied upon

There was Mr Blaine living just in the rear of the White House, holding no office, seeking no office, busily engaged in literary pursuits enjoying himself, in the heart of his family But every where you would hear that as the tall pine in the wilderness holds its head above the forest around it overtopping them all, so this prince of citizen stood head and shoulders above them all (Loud cheering) I do Mr Blaine by no large elected or not elected, and he is the greatest man in statesmanship that lives to-day He is a man above all littleness He holds no grudges, no prejudices Not only Republicans but Democrats hold him in the highest regard

Some people I know, are disaffected I don't know but after the Republican party has been in power so long some of us have not been sufficiently noticed But it seems to me a little unkind in Carl Schurz again to go this country from a foreign land made the Secretary of the Interior, and then when he made a speech for his party as I am doing, to demand $200 for it, and now refuse to support Mr Blaine because he does not consider him an honest man There is Henry Ward Beecher A beautiful speech in it to cost the first stone! Mr Blaine and his wife have for years been members of Dr Tappan's church in Augusta. Mr Blaine has given more than any man in this house and perhaps in Maine for the support of churches He has always been generous to the poor He is not a man who drinks, or even is drinkers in his habits He is not a high liver He is not a libertine in his moral character He has throughout his whole life the breath of scandal has never touched him He is a moral man, a temperate man and a christian I was talking with one of his neighbors who attends the same church with him, and he said he never knew Mr Blaine to absent his self, his family, or his guests from church since he has known him And this is the man that Henry Ward Beecher, holding his robes of sanctity more in him cannot consistently support I pity Mr Beecher Mr Blaine needs no pity

Then there is George William Curtis who belongs to that class of political dudes who wear light pants, part their hair in the middle and their name is the same in nature On his arrival at the convention he took out of his pocket resolutions which he had drafted to be used provided the candidates were not satisfactory He goes into the convention and does all he can to defeat James G. Blaine and after he is nominated comes out and says he cannot in conscience support him You have heard of a bull in a china shop among thieves This is not always true in long gentlemen

In Massachusetts we hear of a large movement against Mr Blaine Prominent among these men we see the name of Mr Codman, who has been footing between Boston and Washington as the agent of the Cycle line of steamers British in his employment British in his nature, British in his sympathies He does not belong to the Republican party President Eliot of Harvard College is another He belongs to that class of doctrinaires an element largely represented in Boston, who favors free trade These ideas are entirely theoretical and not practical Theories would be very well if the whole world was one family, one brotherhood The party would be much stronger were such men out of it New shoots will spring up when the old wood has died out After the election is over and Blaine and Logan are triumphantly elected, and we look over the field for the dead and wounded, the proper epitaph to write over these men will be, they left their party for their party's good

And now, gentlemen, Blaine and Maine sounds well and is well and it will ring through this country from now to November, from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the lakes of the north to the Gulf of Mexico and when the ides of November shall come round to us the refrain will be taken up from the Atlantic to the Pacific, in one loud acclaim of victory on the election of Blaine, of Maine (Tremendous applause)

Mr Nealley, for the Committee, then reported a plan of organization and names of officers as follows

President—J. G. Clark

The meeting was full of enthusiasm and the campaign is opened not to be allowed to flag until James G. Blaine is elected President.
